Lines.

BY TILLIE LAUBACH.

"Sweet sister, thy brow is like marble so white
Say, where are the roses that were once thy delight?
And where is the joy of thy lovely eye?
They're faded and gone, sweet sister say why?"

"The roses on my cheeks, like the flowers of May,
When scorched by the sun they all faded away,
And the joy that once sparkled bright in my eye,
Was chased by sadness, but I may not say why?"

"Sweet sister, of the smiles that once dimpled thy face,
Save in memory's album, I behold not a trace,
And thy voice, that once with the waters did vie,
They're silent and gone, O, pray tell me why?"

"To ask of the violet, why droop'st thy head?
Or the broken flower, say why art thou dead?
Perhaps, they may break the mystical spell,
But, O cherub sister, ask me not to tell."

"Then tell me, dear sister, will I too grow sad?
Will everything wither that makes me so glad?
That all is transient beneath the blue sky,
Sister, sweet sister, Oh, pray tell me why?"

"Love is not transient, and you ne'er may know
The grief that now whitens thy sister's pale brow;
But fate, alas! is a mysterious spell;
Sister, cherub sister, I indeed cannot tell.

BEGINNING RIGHT:

A Story for Young Wives.

BY ELSA MANSFIELD.

'You look proper tired, Mary. Don't you think you had better lie down a little while?'

'I will if you will carry my baby into the bedroom for me,' replied the pale-faced, sad-looking little woman.

'You don't feel very strong, yet, do you Mary?' tenderly asked Aunt Hannah, as she laid the infant in her niece's arms and carefully spread a blanket over them. 'You mus'n't go to gittin' low-spirited. We'll have you nu'sed up so that you won't look like the same woman in a few days.'

'I hope so,' Mrs. Fiske replied, in a trembling voice. 'Do you expect mother and Jane back soon?' she asked, and she drew the blanket over her head, under pretence of screening her babe from the chill of the morn. But Aunt Hannah saw that there were tears on her cheeks; and she knew that it was to hide them that the blanket was drawn up. She answered:

'They'll be here in an hour or two: and you must try to get a good nap 'fore you see 'em.'

Aunt Hannah heard a faint sob as she stepped out of the room. She said to herself:—

'There 'tis ag'in! Another couple has started on the wrong track, and everything 'll go wrong till they git on the right one. Fred Fiske is a tyrant, I know; and I allers thought he would be; and she, poor, little, meek-faced thing, dar'sn't say her soul's her own. She didn't begin right. I've told her mother a good many times that I believed somethin' was goin' wrong with Mary. She allers answers: 'The wear and tear of her three babies does seem to be 'most too much for her!' Strange, Tilda can't see that its taken somethin' besides the babies to bring that dismal expression over Mary's face. I've seen a good many young wives go down just as she is goin', in my time. They'd look sad and mope a few years, then they'd begin to cough, and they'd go right straight down. Things are terribly out of j'int, somehow, or 'twouldn't be so. I don't believe there's a single speck more need on't than there is of dumb critters goin' so. They seem wonderful happy when their young are 'round them; and it seems to me that human critters ought to be. I can't stand it to see Mary look so wilted and crushed. Somethin' must be done. I must talk to her mother once more about it.'

It is a favorable opportunity, while Aunt Hannah is watching for her brother's wife's return to give the reader a short history of the good old lady, and of others who have been introduced in this story.

Hannah White is a rare woman. She is a single lady, sixty years of age; and she resides with her brother, Richard White, the father of Mrs. Fiske. Deprived by death of her father when she was only twelve years old (the eldest of six children) and left with a very feeble mother, nearly the whole care of the household fell upon her at that early age. Her opportunities for getting an education were very limited. In fact, she never went to school one day after her father's death. But her cheerful disposition, good common sense, and eminently good judgment, made her a welcome visitor to all of her acquaintance, in spite of her homely way of expressing herself.

Mr. White and his wife were both well-pleased when Frederick Fiske asked permission to woo their Mary. Aunt Hannah was not; but she did not think best to express her thoughts about him, as she really could bring no distinct charge against him. Still, she had very positive opinions in regard to him.

Frederick Fiske respected himself, exceedingly. He meant to be respected by every one else. Why shouldn't he be? He was industrious and enterprising; and no one could accuse him of any moral delinquency. And was he not always calm and self-possessed?—so discreet and so reticent that it did not seem that an earthquake could shake an unguarded word from his lips? He was principal of the High School in the village in which he resided; and he was spoken of as a good teacher and a very promising young man. Aunt Hannah never spoke against him (except to herself) when people were complimenting him and congratulating her brother and his wife on the good fortune of their daughter; but she would say to herself:

'I've seen young men like him before. They make hard husbands to git along with. They allers want their wives to feel the crushin' weight of their dignity. Fiske, probably, never'll say a rough, hard word to any woman, but he'll so manage, his wife'll feel as much in bondage in a short time as any slave ever did. Mary will soon learn that all he requires of her in regard to thinkin' is to think just as he thinks, if she thinks at all. Such kind of men call women blue-stockin's and strong-minded, if they read and try to know somethin'; and, if they don't, they call 'em weak-minded and frivolous. They find fault with 'em if they do, and they despise them if they don't. Thank the Lord! all men don't feel so; but there's enough of 'em to raise the mischief with a great many women, and they, in their turn, raise the mischief with a great many more; for such wives (if they don't sink down and die young) are apt to grow hard and bitter after awhile, and then they're down on all the men, and they think that all women are abused; and they git a great many women to feelin' discontented who have no just cause for feelin' so.'

Aunt Hannah felt sure, that morning, that her fears had proved true. She met her sister-in-law at the gate and told her that Mary was there, and was then lying down, 'and I hope she has gone to sleep,' she added. 'I want to have a talk with you 'fore she wakes up. Trouble of some kind is wearin' the dear child out, you may depend on't. We must help her out of this 'slough of despond' or she'll sink out of our sight 'fore we know it. Fred. Fiske couldn't quite kill me with his lordliness, but I'm re'ly afraid he will her.'

'Why, Hannah!' exclaimed Mrs. White, 'Frederick never seems unkind to Mary, and she never complains about him.'

'I presume she never does. She isn't one of the complainin' sort. But you must have noticed how she lowers her voice and speaks hardly above a whisper when he is in, and how worried and anxious she looks if everything is not in its place; or if the little girls make any noise when he is readin'. You know, Tilda, she is a great deal more as she used to be when he is out of the house. Why should a wife stand in such awe of her husband? What a wretched household it'll be, by-and-by, if they keep on in this way.'

'You really alarm me,' said Mrs. White.

'You have reason to be alarmed,' Aunt Hannah replied. 'Mary is lookin' quite too pale, thin and discouraged. But, it is not entirely Fred's fault, that things are, as they are. Mary didn't begin right. It would have been wise for her to do as she has done if she had married a man whose turn of mind was entirely different from Fred's. But with a man of his stamp she could hardly have done worse for herself.'

'Why, what has she done?'

'You know, Tilda, that before she was married she was very fond of her studies, and was considered quite as good a scholar as Fred, and he seemed quite proud of it. She should allers have kept him feelin' so. But as soon as she was married she dropped all her studies, and gave all her time to domestic duties, and depended upon Fred to tell her all that she wanted to know. When a woman is as meek and quiet as Mary is, and a man is natur'ly as self-confident and domineerin' as Fred is, it is easy enough to see beforehand what such a course would result in. He tells her what he thinks is best for her to know; and it's evident he don't think it's necessary for her to know anything outside of household matters. He knows enough for both, so she needn't trouble herself with anything outside of her sphere. Doesn't he give honor unto the wife as unto the weaker vessel? I wonder what good, old Saint Peter would have said to such an interpretation. Don't you see, Tilda, that she begun wrong?'

'Perhaps she did; but she never has had spare time for studying.'

'She never will have so long as she puts three ruffles on the skirts of her little girls' every-day dresses, and spends every spare minute for a whole month in embroiderin' a baby's blanket. The children aint a speck better off for it, but they would be, by-and-by, if she should study, now.'

'You are right, no doubt. But Frederick always wants the children dressed tastefully; and he wants the house in perfect order, always; and it does seem—Hark! I believe I hear the baby. I presume she'll be right out with him.'

'I'll go and bring the baby out,' said Aunt Hannah. 'She don't look as if she had strength enough to lift a kitten.'

Mrs. White threw aside her bonnet and shawl and followed Aunt Hannah. She went directly to the bed and kissed her daughter. Mary threw her arms around her mother's neck, and said:

'I'm so glad you come home once more.'

'We are quite as glad to have you come, I assure you,' Mrs. White replied; 'and we must get up something special in honor of the occasion. Just think of it, sister Hannah, this is my first visit from my first grandson.'

Mrs. White was one of those women who have the faculty—and a most blessed faculty it is—of conversing cheerfully whenever the occasion demands. But she did not feel cheerful just then, for she saw that there was a red circle around her daughter's eyes, and that she was still struggling to keep down the rising sobs.

Five minutes afterward Mrs. Fiske sat before the fire in her mother's sitting-room. Her sister Jane sat by her side holding her little nephew and talking baby talk to him, while Mrs. White and Aunt Hannah busied themselves getting dinner. In the intervals of the lullabying and there-thereing to the baby, Aunt Hannah caught snatches of conversation between the sisters, as she passed to and fro, that confirmed her in her surmises and filled her righteous soul of indignation. Mrs. White, also, heard enough to deepen the anxiety which she already felt, and to bring a shade of sadness over her countenance. Jane had never seen her nephew before. She looked at his eyes and talked of their size, shape and color; she commented upon each feature of his face. She said his mouth was like the Fiske's—his chin like his mother's, and she declared that his hands were shaped precisely like his grand-father White's.

'What do you think about him, Mary? Which side of the house do you think he resembles?' she asked.

'I hardly know,' Mrs. Fiske replied, in a dull, languid way, 'but most people think he looks very much like his father.'

'Of course that is pleasing to you,' Jane said, 'for I remember that you used to pride yourself a good deal in his fine looks. You are very fortunate in your children. With so fine a boy as this, and two beautiful little girls, you must be very happy.'

As Jane looked up for some response to her remarks, she was startled at the woe-begone look Mrs. Fiske wore, and she exclaimed:

'Why, what's the matter, Mary? How dejected you look! Was it too much for you riding up here?'

'It fatigued me some, I suppose. But that's nothing new. I am weary all of the time. It is strange, Jane, that girls can't know when they are well off. If you are not engaged to Herbert Ives, you'd better take warning and stay where you are. Now, you can come and go when you please—attend a lecture, or go out making calls, or stay at home, just as you fancy; and you have no fears, if you are pleased with yourself, but what everybody else is pleased. But, if you get married, you will want to please your husband, and take good care of your children, if you are so fortunate or *un*fortunate as to have them, and that makes a slave of a woman.'

'Why, sister Mary!' said Jane, opening her eyes wide with astonishment. 'What would Frederick think to hear you make such remarks? Seems to me, he wouldn't feel very highly complimented; and the dear babies, if they could understand you, wouldn't think they were very highly prized. I always supposed that mothers, when they were rearing their families, had a great many cares and anxieties, and that, if they were not quite wealthy, they had to work pretty hard: but I thought that it was cheerful service—a labor of love, and that they had a great deal of happiness, notwithstanding their cares.'

'Oh, of course you can't understand it, yet; nor you never will till you learn it by experience. When you have been married half a dozen years, you will view things very differently from what you do now.'

'May be I shall,' Jane replied, 'but I can't think that all wives and mothers feel as you do. This world would be a pretty wretched place if they did. I think I should be about ready to take my departure. I am sure that our mother never felt as you are feeling.'

Mrs. Fiske sighed and made no reply. No doubt, the thoughts of the contrast between her mother's feelings and her own, drew that sigh forth. Mrs. White whispered to Aunt Hannah in the buttery:

'What an awful state of things there must be between her and Fred! What will it end in? I beg you to stay at home from the lecture this evening, and have a thorough talk with her, while the rest of us are gone. I'd rather trust you than myself. You never make bad matters worse.'

At half-past seven most of the family had gone to the lecture; and Aunt Hannah and Mrs. Fiske were sitting together in Aunt Hannah's chamber. Everything in that chamber seemed cheerful and cozy, and suggestive of comfort to Mrs. Fiske. It seemed to her, that evening, that she would always like to stay there. The joys of her childhood had always been shared with Aunt Hannah, in that room, and her tears had been wiped away there. She said with a half-sigh:

'How happy you are, and always have been, haven't you, Aunt Hannah?'

'For the most part I have been pretty happy,' Aunt Hannah replied, 'but I have not lived without my cares. You have often heard your father tell how much was put upon me when I was only twelve years old—more than I knew how to get along with; but, even then, I was not really unhappy. It don't seem to me that you ought to be unhappy, Mary, but I'm afraid you are. When you was a girl, at home, you allers let me talk to you just as I pleased. You'll let me have the same privilege to-night, won't you? I've been achin' to have a real out-and-out talk with you for a whole year; but I've been puttin' it off, hopin' that you'd find your own way out of your troubles.'

'Why, what do you mean, Aunt Hannah?' asked Mrs. Fiske, in a surprised tone. 'You never heard me complain of having trouble, did you? Perhaps you overheard me talking to Jane, this morning, about the cares and anxieties of young married women. For my part I can't see how any woman could get along with the care of a house and three children without feeling tired out, and, at times, utterly discouraged. I suppose that you will tell me that my mother didn't feel so when she had six children to do for. But things are different now from what they were then. Fashions are such people can't do as they used to do. Then, father is one of those easy, good-natured mortals who are not annoyed if things do get a little topsy-turvy sometimes. I can remember when he used to fly around and set back the chairs, and pick up the children's playthings if he saw some one coming in. He would always say to mother, Never mind, folks must expect some litter where half a dozen children are. I don't think there are many men like him in that respect. Frederick is very differently constituted. (I rather think he is, Aunt Hannah said to herself). It annoys him exceedingly if everything is not in perfect order. And I can assure you, Aunt Hannah, it takes all my time and strength to keep things so. I hardly find time to look in a book or newspaper, and I feel as if I was forgetting all that I ever learned. Men go and come when they please—find time to read the newspapers every day; and they don't seem much more tied up than they did before they had families.'

Aunt Hannah had started right. She had led Mrs. Fiske to make just such remarks as she wanted her to make. The way was open for Aunt Hannah to say what she wanted to say in reply. She was too shrewd and too judicious to complain to any wife about her husband; for she knew that any true wife would bear it better to be told of her own faults, than to be told of her husband's. She said:

'I have seen so many young wives and mothers situated just as you are, and feeling just as you do, I understand all about it. Such women begin wrong, and git everything in their households to goin' wrong, and then they groan all the rest of their days for what they have brought upon themselves. The fact is, Mary, you commenced to spoil Fred as soon as you was married, and if you don't turn right about you'll finish the job, and very likely ruin your children; and do a vast deal of harm to your own sex, besides.''

Mrs. Fiske no longer looked dull or pale. Her face was flushed and her eyes were wide open. She was thoroughly aroused. She exclaimed:

'I spoil my husband, and ruin my children! I do harm to my own sex! Really, that needs some explanation. If any one else had said that to me I should feel indignant. But you, Aunt Hannah—you can't mean anything unkind. For pity's sake tell me what you do mean. I don't understand you at all. I have done the best that I knew how to do for my children; and if any wife ever tried to be a dutiful wife and tried to please her husband, I am sure that I have.'

Mrs. Fiske's voice faltered in the last sentence, and as soon as she ceased speaking she burst into tears, wrung from her by the thought of the many times she had failed to please him, or to get one appreciative word, notwithstanding all her trying. Alas! scores of wives beside her have shed scalding tears in secret for the same reason. And yet, husbands should not be blamed, altogether, for this state of things. Aunt Hannah was right in thinking that the trouble comes, in the main, from wives not beginning right.

After a few moments, Mrs. Fiske sobbed out: 'Do excuse me, Aunt Hannah, I'm not weeping for anything that you have said—I must unburden myself to you, Aunt Hannah—you can be trusted—you never violate confidence—I must tell you that I do not enjoy life at all—I feel unhappy a good deal of the time—some of the time I am perfectly wretched.'

Here the thoughts of her wretchedness so overcame her that she broke down entirely, and wept passionately. Struggling to regain her composure, she soon added:

'You said that for a whole year you had wanted to talk to me. I have wanted for more than a year to confide my troubles to somebody. The last time that mother was down to our house, I almost made up my mind to tell her how I was feeling; but father and Frederick are so different I thought she couldn't understand it. I was afraid that she would blame him, and I couldn't bear to hear any one do that. Then I thought that I would have a confidential talk with some of my young married friends, and see if they had any such troubles to contend with. But pride and self-respect kept me from doing that. I felt that it would be lowering the dignity of our household to admit, to any one, that the wheels of our domestic machinery didn't run smoothly. You think that my troubles arise from my own mismanagement. I beg of you to show me wherein I have mismanaged. Now that the ice is broken, we may as well have an out-and-out talk, as you said. You may ask me any question that you please. I am willing to tell you anything that will assist you in advising me.'

A less discreet woman than Aunt Hannah, probably, would have availed herself of the opportunity to question Mrs. Fiske concerning her husband. Aunt Hannah knew better. She knew that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, true women regret afterward for any communication, of that sort, they have been led to make in some hour of bitterness; and that they seldom fail to feel that the questioner took an ungenerous advantage of them.

She replied: 'It is not necessary for you to tell me anything. I think I understand your case, perfectly. You'll git by your troubles, after awhile, if you have patience and perseverance. You see, you and Fred didn't begin right. I'll tell you a story.'

Mrs. Fiske was all attention. Aunt Hannah's stories were always to the point.

'I've often thought,' commenced Aunt Hannah, 'that you and Fred both acted as though you was brought up by an old doctor who kept our school the winter that I was ten years old. School used to keep every other Saturday in them days. Saturday afternoon was spent in recitin' the Commandments—the Lord's Prayer, and the Catechism. In addition to that, the doctor required every scholar in the first class to learn a few verses from the Bible, or some passage from some favorite book of his. He hardly ever gave two scholars the same passage. But one Saturday he had every girl, in the first class, learn and recite something that John Milton says Eve said to Adam. I learned it hearin' it over so many times. This was it:

"My Author and Disposer; what thou bidst,
Unargued, I obey; so God ordains;
God is thy law, thou mine; to know no more
Is woman's happiest knowledge and her praise."

The doctor said that Milton wrote a great many beautiful things but he considered them four lines, the finest lines he ever wrote. He talked a long time to the girls about it, and he said that he hoped they would all feel like that toward their husbands when they got settled in life. I can't remember one-half he said, but I do remember just how the big boys looked when he was talkin'. They seemed so pleased, gratified and satisfied, I had no doubt they thought that passage was quite as nice as the doctor did. I remember, too, how pompous and lordly they used to appear when we were goin' home from school after such a talk. The most forward and talkin' ones used to make their boasts about how they should manage their wives and make 'em obey. I can't help laughin', to this day, when I think how submissively, modestly and meekly the girls received such talk, and with what soft and subdued tones they answered, if the boys asked 'em a question. I suppose they were tryin' to obey the doctor's injunctions in regard to bein' humble and dutiful, and I presume they thought they looked as amiable and interesting, to the boys, as Eve did to Adam when she called him her Author and Disposer.

There was nine girls in the first class. Polly Parson, a sprightly, black-eyed, rosy-cheeked girl, was an odd one among 'em. She was full of life and wit; and she was considered a little pert and saucy, but we all liked her. She was uncommon smart and handy. If an accident happened, or trouble of any kind came along we were all glad to have Polly 'round. If a little child fell into the brook near the school-house, she never screamed to the big boys to come and git it out, but she'd pull it out herself, and git its clothes all wrung out 'fore some of the other girls would git through screaming. When the boys got into their big talks, she never dropped her eyes and looked abashed, but she'd allers put in a word herself. That night, when we were goin' home from school, Polly's eyes sparkled a little more'n common, and her cheeks were a little red. I thought she'd have somethin' to say, and she did. She told the boys she was glad they had such nice ideas about wives, and she hoped that they'd all be blessed some time with wives as lovely and as docile as the doctor's wife. That was pretty keen in Polly, for the doctor's wife was one of the most soft, helpless, wishy-washy women I ever did see. The doctor came along in a minute. Polly went up to him and said meekly and beseechingly: 'Dr. Richards, have you got one copy of those beautiful lines left? If you have, doctor, will you please give it to me?' He had written 'em off on little slips of paper for each girl. He looked very smilingly on Polly and asked her if she had lost hers. 'No, sir,' she replied, but I shouldn't like to give mine away; and I want one to send down to Dan. Fletcher's wife. I don't think that she ever read it. She won't obey Dan, and she will argue with him.' The doctor said: 'Tut, tut, Poll! I'm surprised, I'm surpised!' and he stepped along pretty quick. Polly said in a low tone: 'I thought he would be. You see, the doctor was a justice of the peace, and Dan was one of the most ugly and tyrannical critters that ever trod shoe-leather, and he was up 'fore the doctor only a week afore for whippin' his wife. Every boy there laughed in in spite of himself.'

'Look here, boys,' Polly said, running ahead a little and turnin' round and facin' us, 'if you swallow such stuff as the doctor has been givin' us this afternoon, you needn't one of you ever ask me to marry you, for you'd want to rule with a rod of iron. And, girls, I want to tell you that you'll be just like the doctor's wife if you try to live up to the doctor's creed. I declare some of you begin to look like her already. What do you suppose that God gave you the power of thinkin' and consciences for, if you are never to make use of either? Do you suppose that he made a mistake and endowed you with more gifts than you need? You'll git sick of such nonsense sometime, and then you'll quarrel with your husbands. I shan't ever quarrel with mine, you see if I do. He shall have his rights and I shall have mine—you see if I don't!'

'I declare, Aunt Hannah, I begin to believe in women's rights; don't you?' said Mrs. Fiske, speaking for the first time since Aunt Hannah commenced her story.

'Begin to believe! Why, child, I allers did believe in women's rights, and men's rights, and childrens rights. I believe that each human bein' has rights that no other human bein' should be allowed to trample on.'

'I mean that I begin to believe in woman suffrage.'

'Oh, that's what you mean? Well, we'll talk about that to-morrow, and the rest of the family can join us. But, to-night while we are alone, we want to see if we can't find some way for you out of your troubles. If you could go to the ballot-box to-morrow, Mary, and put in fifty votes, I can't see as it would help you out of your present troubles any more than it would lift you out of a well if you had tumbled into one.'

'What will help me, Aunt Hannah? What can I do?'

'Go to your husband with your troubles. That'll be a hundred times better than to brood over 'em in secret, and a thousand times better than to tell 'em to any one else. Tell him that you're unhappy—that you're not satisfied with your present way of livin', that you don't think God designed that husband and wife should live together as you and he are livin'. Say everything right out, kindly and respectfully, but as plainly and frankly as Polly Parson would. Don't keep any of your grievances back. A full understandin' is allers better than a half way one.'

Mrs. Fiske's heart misgave her as she thought of the many things she would have to tell him, and of the way that he would probably receive it. She said:

'It is easy enough to think beforehand how one will manage when married, Aunt Hannah. Did Polly Parson ever marry?'

'She did, and I doubt if a better wife or mother ever lived. Her husband was one of those very school-boys who boasted about makin' their wives obey. He came to the conclusion that it was not unsafe to marry a woman who believed that God was her Author and Disposer, and who felt that her first accountability should be to Him. You have made mistakes, Mary, that Polly never would have made. She allers kept herself well-informed so that she could talk to her husband as understanin'ly as his male friends could. She never would have given up all her readin' and spent her time and strength in rufflin' and flouncin' and embroiderin' little children's clothes as you hav,e And she—'

Here Aunt Hannah was cut short by the return of the family from the lecture. When Fiske came for his wife, Aunt Hannah privately enjoined upon her to have a good talk with him during their ride home. But Mrs. Fiske did not talk with him that day nor the next. She dreaded it—she could not get up the courage. But she thought continually of the story Aunt Hannah told her, and of the mistaken way in which she commenced her own married life. She could hardly eat or sleep. She looked paler and thinner than usual. About a week after her return she came to the conclusion that she could not and would not live in that wretched way any longer. She took her children up to bed that night before their accustomed time. Then she hastened to the library. She dared not stop to rest herself one moment, lest her courage should fail. She did not find her husband with book in hand as she expected. He was apparently in deep thought. She moved so silently he was not aware of her presence till she spoke. She said: 'The children are in bed, and no one is in. If you please, Frederick, I should like to spend this evening in conversing with you.' She spoke very low, and her voice trembled. As he looked up he was appalled by the death-like pallor of her countenance. What was he, he thought, that she should approach him with such fear and trembling. Had she known how he was feeling, and how things had transpired to open his eyes, her talk would have seemed less difficult. But she did not know how much he missed her during her absence; nor how many things he had to attend to that he never thought of looking after when she was home. He wondered how she ever kept things in such perfect order with so heedless a girl as Bridget. The table-cloth was on awry, and the dishes looked as though they were pitched upon the table at every meal. He was disgusted with the disorder, and he told Bridget so, most emphatically. That evening he overheard her telling one of her friends that Mrs. Fiske was one of the best women in the world; and if it wasn't for her she wouldn't stay in that house another hour; but she pitied the poor woman so, she wouldn't leave her. She was just wearing her life out to please her husband, and she never got thank you for it. She was getting thinner and paler every day, but not a word of complaint did she make. Whether in his school or at home, Bridget's words kept ringing in his ears, and compelled him to feel that there was more truth in them than he was ready to admit at first. He longed to have the day come around when he was to go for his wife. He shuddered as he thought that the time might not be far distant when she would be called to go where he never could bring her back. So that evening he was in the best frame of mind possible to receive his wife. In fact, he felt himself that he could live so no longer. In reply to her request he took her hand and said gently; 'That is just how I want to spend this evening, my dear. I was about to seek you for the same purpose.' He drew her on his knee and added: 'I have noticed since your return from your father's, that you seemed troubled about something. What is it, darling? Tell me everything, freely.'

Darling! The old endearing word, in the old, tender tones! What a thrill they sent through her. Had he met her coldly and formally, she probably would have been able to maintain her composure. But this was so different from the reception that she had prepared herself to meet, she was overcome by it. She bowed her head on his shoulder and wept for a long time. She did not know that his tears mingled with hers. When she could speak he drew her out till she said more than she thought of saying when she entered the room. She confessed to him how unhappy she had been a great deal of the time in her married life. She told him that she had got so that she almost dreaded to see him coming from school. For she did not expect that he would tell her anything, or say anything to her except by way of reproofs for something that was not done, or was not properly done. She told him how she always looked around the room to see if things were in order, and hurried to put things in their places before he entered the door. She also told him how grieved and humiliated she felt at his cold and formal way of answering her in the presence of others.

It cut him to the quick, but he patiently and humbly heard her through, for he was convinced that he richly deserved it all. What he said in reply was, certainly, very comforting to her. She sat on his knee, that night, a happier wife than she had been at any time before since she first became his bride. They commenced anew from that time. She spends nearly all of her evenings in the library with him now. They read and study together, except when she is compelled to use her needle. Then he reads to her. She no longer feels that she is forgetting all that she ever learned.

'Do you feel now as you did a year ago, in regard to my getting married, Mary?' Mrs. Fiske's sister Jane archly asked her, a short time since. (Herbert Ives and Jane expect to be married next month.)

'Mrs. Fiske blushed, and looked affectionately upon her husband as she replied: 'All I have to say now in regard to it is, that I most earnestly hope that you and Herbert will be as happy as Frederick and I are.'

'And I as earnestly hope,' said Mr. Fiske, 'that you and he will never come as near making shipwreck of your domestic happiness as we did. Be sure that you begin right.'

THERE is a perennial nobleness, and even sacredness in work. Were he never so benighted, forgetful of his high calling, there is always hope in a man that actually and earnestly works; in idleness alone there is a personal despair. Blessed is he who has found his work. Labor is life.

The Result.

In another column we give the official figures of the result of the recent election in this State. It will be seen that the vote is very far from being a full one, General McCANDLESS receiving 43,873 less than Governor SEYMOUR received in 1868, and Dr. STANTON receiving 58,281 less than General GRANT then received. Without allowing for an increase of voters there were therefore 102,154 voters who did not vote at the late election. These figures fully establish that the party that turned out the best won, and as the Radicals had the money (which they collected mainly from their office-holders) they succeeded best in getting out their voters. Yet had not the Democrats been dissatisfied with their platform and disheartened by their local divisions we believe the reverse would have been true, and that a splendid Democratic triumph would have resulted. It is plain, therefore, what must be done in future to obtain success:

1. Nominate candidates who have a State reputation for ability, integrity and stern devotion to the tenets of the Democratic party.

2. Place them on a platform that will be entirely satisfactory to the whole party.

3. Appoint a State Committee to conduct the campaign who have no personal purposes to subserve, and who will devote their energies to producing union in our own ranks, and vigorously exposing all the wrong action of the Radicals and presenting the public with the clearest proof thereof.

4. The most complete union of the Democratic party in every county and district, and to this end there must be unanimous acquiescence in all nominations. It is clearly idle to expect success without union, and there is no other way to obtain this than to abide by the action of our county conventions.

With these requirements fulfilled, victory may be obtained—without them it is impossible.

A Senatorial Difficulty.

The return judges of the Franklin and Cumberland district refused to give a certificate of election to WEAKLY, Radical, on the ground that he had bribed voters to support him. Although the Radicals have been guilty of defying public sentiment in that way we hope such practices will never be endorsed by the Democracy. WEAKLY had a majority of about 800 votes and the duty of the return judges was a very plain one, to-wit: to add up the returns and give a certificate of election to the person having a majority. It was not their business to inquire into the motives that actuated voters, and this forms their ground of objection. However corruptly the voters were influenced, the man who had a majority of votes is entitled to the return, and to the seat unless successfully contested before the Senate.

The Radicals themselves set the pattern for this wrong action in several instances—once when they thus cheated General FOSTER out of a seat in Congress. At the next election the people elected him by a majority so large that it could not be disputed. The Radicals also cheated us out of a Senator in the First district in that way, and at the next election the people elected DECHERT, Democrat, by 1300 majority in a Republican district! These instances are sufficient to prove that there is no permanent advantage to be gained by such wrong action, and that the people will resent it at the first opportunity.

But, above all that, we hope that the Democratic Senators will have more respect for themselves and their party than to follow Radical examples of rascality in setting aside election majorities. Just and proper action on their part will be a stern rebuke to Radical practices and a proud vindication of Democratic honor.

Tomfoolery.

The Pittsburg Post regales its readers with a long article in favor of T. A. SCOTT for President—President of the United States! Mr. SCOTT is at present and has been for some years a Vice-President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and is by occupation a general bummer for that institution. Since the Radicals have been in power he has "run" the Legislature of this State, by means which would be scarcely respectable in a Presidential aspirant. He has been the marshal of the corrupt members of that body and has the reputation of being their paymaster, so far as railroad legislation, the management of the Treasury, the repeal of tonnage taxes, the extraction of the Sinking fund, and the election of Senators, Treasurers, &c. are concerned. If these occupations and experiences fit a man for the Presidency, then Mr. SCOTT has fitness.

But it is a burlesque upon the Presidency and upon candidacy, as well as upon newspapers, for such men to be named for such distinguished positions. It is degrading to the office and to the people to whom the suggestion is addressed, and should be met with the severest reprehension. It is true that Mr. SCOTT has much distinction as a manager of railroads and in that capacity may well be trusted with the conduct of the enterprises placed in his charge, but it would be as sensible to name a man for President because he had been a successful horse-drover or mule trainer! So absurd are Presidential aspirations on his part, that in fact it would be discreditable to discuss the total want of propriety in naming him in that connection. If any body has a legislative job or a keen railroad speculation on hand it might be well to employ Mr. SCOTT, and in that line is found the measure of his talents as well as distinction.

THE Mormon polygamy question, it is stated, will go to the U. S. Supreme Court. A leading Mormon has been convicted in a U. S. Circuit Court of polygamy, for having more than one wife. Others have been arrested and will no doubt be convicted. The Federal government has no jurisdiction over the subject in the States and never before exercised any in the territories. It is doubted whether it has authority over the subject any where, and that question the Supreme Court will be called upon to decide.

The Town Map.

In our advertising columns will be found a notice from M. E. JACKSON, Esq., Commissioner appointed by the Court upon exceptions filed to the town map, that he will give all persons interested a hearing at the Courthouse on Monday, November 20th, at 10 o'clock a. m. The importance of correctness in the town map must not be overlooked by our citizens, who are authorized to make objections to it at any time before it shall be approved by the Court. By the supplement to the town charter, approved 26th May, 1871, (P. Law's 1105,) it is provided that the Court "shall hear and consider any complaint or objection made by any citizen of the town, or owner of real estate therein, against the correctness of the map, or the location of the lines and parts thereof prior to the approval of the same; * * * and said map at all times after the approval thereof * * shall be receivable in evidence in any suit, prosecution or proceeding whatsoever, in which the same shall be pertinent, and shall be held as conclusive evidence of the true location of the boundaries and highways of said town, as established at the date of its approval, and as prima facia evidence of the situation and boundaries or limits of lots, outlots, farm lands, canal wharves, landings, railroads, buildings and structures of said town at the same time, so far as the same shall be set forth, delineated or mentioned on said map."

Thus, it appears, that all property owners must make their objections to the map, if they have any, before it shall be approved, as it will be too late afterwards. After its approval the map will be legal evidence in all the particulars above mentioned, in all controversies and proceedings, at law or in equity. The map is suspended in the Prothonotary's office, open to the inspection of any person, and we advise our citizens to examine it in due time and see to it that it is correct in all respects in which their interests are involved.

It is true that by the third section of the act above mentioned, buildings now erected which project within the limits of highways are to be permitted to remain until rebuilt, reconstructed, removed or abandoned, (unless taken for public use, or compensation made), but this easement or privilege of property owners does not affect the location of the lines of streets, lanes and alleys as they are to be ultimately used, nor their location independent of building projections.

The Legislature.

The following is given as the result of the election for members of the Legislature, to wit:

	Senate.	House.
Republicans	17	62
Democrats	16	38
Republican majority	1	24

The Senate is composed very generally of men of ability—several of both parties being quite able men. Amongst the new members elected or re-elected are CONNELL and DAVIS of Philadelphia and STRANG of Tioga, all Radicals, who rank amongst the most experienced and reckless legislative corruptionists in the State.

Captain BROCKWAY, of this county, and Mr. LATTA, of Westmoreland, will be the strongest debaters on the Democratic side in the House, with NOYES of Clinton, and MEEK of Centre, and a very few others, amongst the best managers on that side. Aside from these, unless the unknown new members shall develope some talent, the House is very barren both of ability and respectability. We doubt whether Philadelphia sends a single member who is a man of fair reputation for integrity and capacity.

We have hopes that the Senate will prevent any serious mischief being done except where bribery may be resorted to. In the latter case there is no hope of either House. There is much difference of opinion as to how far Governor GEARY can be depended upon to veto improper measures, but some good may be hoped from that quarter.

The Official Returns.

A table of official returns is published in some of the papers, but it is partly made up from unofficial sources. We await an authorized table from the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth. As the table stands, the following are the footings up, to-wit:

AUDITOR GENERAL.
Stanton, Republican	283,999
McCandless, Democrat	269,509
Spangler, Prohibition	3,175
Stanton's majority over McCandless	14,490
SURVEYOR GENERAL.
Beath, Republican	287,165
Cooper, Democrat	266,795
Wheeler, Prohibition	3,012
Beath's majority over Cooper	20,370
CONVENTION.
For a Constitutional Convention	332,231
Against " "	72,073
Majority for Convention	260,158

PACKER'S vote for Governor in 1869 exceeded the vote of STANTON nearly 2,000. The difference between the vote of the respective candidates for Auditor and Surveyor General occurred mainly in Allegheny county, where a labor organization supported MCCANDLESS and BEATH.

More Stealing—Diamond Cut Diamond!

It is stated that State Treasurer MACKEY has lost $160,000 by the failure of a Philadelphia banker with whom he had deposited that amount of State money. He announces that the State will lose nothing, he and his sureties being bound for the money. We judge that is about the amount he has made since he has been Treasurer, less the sum he paid members and others for their votes and influence. But he has a clear field now, with Dr. STANTON to settle with! The amount of the loss will be carried by the State while these gentry are in office, the people losing the interest, and the improper gains of the Treasury paying back the principal in the distant future, if it is ever paid. The banker who stole the money will quiet his conscience with the reflection that he merely robbed a thief. The people must expect to pay the piper while they elect Radicals to office.

IT is reported that Postmaster-General Creswell is seriously implicated in the great whisky frauds at Baltimore, and that the administration is making desperate efforts to prevent unpleasant revelations.

THE negro vote of this State is estimated at fully 26,000. As they nearly all voted the Radical ticket, there was a majority of at least 10,000 white votes in favor of Gen. MCCANDLESS at the late election.

The Defeat.

To show our readers what others think, we extract the following from the Clinton Democrat, one of the ablest Democratic papers in the State, to-wit:

"The State has gone largely Radical, even exceeding the expectations of the leaders of that party. There must have been a deep-seated cause for it. What that cause was is for us to find out, and avoid it in the future. It was not the great popularity of the Radical candidates, for they were comparatively obscure men until advertised and puffed by their papers. Nor was it the unpopularity of the Democratic candidates, for McCandless and Cooper were all that could be asked on the score of popularity. This brings us to the popular method of throwing aside these results, that of charging "unparalleled corruption," "federal patronage," &c., on our opponents. Neither will that reach it.

"Federal patronage" unquestionably had a potent influence, and money—liberally, aye, profusely used—did very much to help the result; but to account for it in this way is to ignore antecedent facts showing the progress of Democracy, and presupposes a corruption on the part of the people that does not exist, and this we say in no extenuation of the rascals who can be and are bought, for they are painfully numerous. The people are all right. The trouble is, they have been badly treated by party managers. They would not stand it, and hence came the stunning rebuke in the result of the late election.

"Before the State Convention met, Democracy was a unit. Its morale was splendid, and a steady advance upon the majorities and positions of the Radicals made it bouyant with hope and sanguine of success. The delegates met in convention. There a few men full of personal ambition, but without statesmanship, committed the fatal mistake of passing the so-called ninth resolution, "deprecating the discussion of questions" which, up to that very day, the press and speakers of the party had been pronouncing as unparalleled, bold invasions of the Constitution and of the rights of the States, forced through by fraud, chicane, and military authority. At one fell swoop these men sought to wipe out the education of years! and to hush a discussion that theretofore they had been zealously ready to keep up. What absolute folly! It seems almost a verification of the proverb that 'Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad!'

"Prior to this we were sailing smoothly with the current of public favor, and offensively charging home upon Radicalism. In a day the course was changed, and against the current we had to assail. The morale of the party was seriously impaired, our popular candidates were carrying dead weight, and we were but weakly on the offensive, if on it at all, and the contest culminated very naturally in a severe defeat.

"It becomes us now to meet it like men who know how to organize victory out of defeat. That spirit wins. To do it, we must discuss the causes of the result, remedy them, and organize fresh for a more vigorous and determined charge upon Radicalism. Drop the hated ninth resolution and its concomitants, the cause of our defeat—let unity be restored—let our measures and men be conspicuously free from guile or lack of principle—take up honest and capable men for office, even down to the lowest municipal position, (for the strength of the whole rests upon the integrity of its parts,) avoiding party 'hacks' (for they are a standing offense)—battle against corruption in every form—fight against federal influence in State affairs—struggle unshrinkingly against military domination—maintain a strict construction of the Constitution and insist upon keeping power in and with the people and out of the federal head—war for the equality of the States—beware of doubtful men—let your platform be plainly Democratic, and trust no man who equivocates, who will not stand openly and squarely upon it—organize thoroughly for the campaign of 1872—and we will be back again in the old line of march, full of elan, moving on to victory! The principles of the masses are Democratic, and if we are wise in management and avoid such blunders as the last, we will have their votes and Democracy will again control public affairs.

Martial Law in the South.

Private and public accounts paint the confusion and alarm created in South Carolina by the political crusade, begun there by the carpet-bag officials under pretext of "martial law." Citizens are seized and dragged to jail without any charge made against them. All the safeguards of civilized society are swept away. No man is safe from private malice. A state very like chaos is likely to be produced at the South, by profligate politicians, seeking their own interest, in contempt of every existing law. They are sparing no effort to rekindle civil war in the South, because it pays. They are driving citizens from their homes, with the dread of arbitrary arrest, and indefinite imprisonment, and are now creating the roving bands of desperate men whose existence they have feigned.—Age.

That is the kind of liberty the American people are enjoying under the GRANT administration. It will be extended. Already the Radical hounds are crying for the blood of Mississippi—next will come Louisiana, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, &c. When the Southern States are fairly under the heel of the Radical despot, the same game will be applied to the Northern States if necessary to secure the continuance of GRANT in office. How long will the people endure such tyranny? Will they forever stand by and see State after State bound hand and foot?

HAWKINS, the Mormon, has been convicted at Salt Lake City, of bigamy. This is the first case under the new law.

The New Episcopal Diocese.

By the consent of the general convention, in Baltimore, a new diocese has been formed, to comprise all that part of Pennsylvania lying east of the Allegheny Mountains, except the counties of Philadelphia, Chester, Bucks, Delaware and Montgomery. It is to go into existence on All Saints day, the 1st proximo, the primary convention for organization being held November 8th. The chief interest now centres in the election of Bishop. A number of names have already been mentioned, both from within and without the diocese. The location of the See, or Bishop's residence, will also have to be determined on at the same time. For this, Mauch Chunk, Allentown, Bethlehem, Reading, Harrisburg, Williamsport and Scranton have been suggested, but it is now difficult to predict which one of them will be selected.

The new Diocese will contain about 1,500,000 souls. In it are included nearly 80 parishes and over 90 clergymen, and the Church is growing steadily. High anticipations are entertained for its honorable career, which we trust will be fully realized.

The Right Rev. Bishop Stevens, has addressed the following to the clergy and parishes lying within that portion of Pennsylvania about to be set off as a new diocese:

The general convention of the Protestant Episcopal churches of the United States of America having ratified the action of the convention of the diocese lying west and north of the western line of the counties of Chester, Montgomery and Bucks has been set off as a new diocese, to take effect on the first day of November next, it is made my duty by section 1, canon 6, title 3 of the digest, to call the primary convention of the new diocese for the purpose of enabling it to organize.

Acting under this authority, I hereby call a convention of the clergy and laity of that portion of the diocese thus set off, to meet in St. Stephen's church, Harrisburg, on Wednesday, the 8th day of November, at ten o'clock in the morning, then and there to assemble and organize a new diocese.

Until such new diocese shall be fully organized it is under the constitution and canons of the diocese of Pennsylvania, and hence the same provisions which regulate the election of deputies in the diocese of Pennsylvania must govern the choice of the parishes of the new diocese, requiring of them the same credentials of appointment as are now required by the convention of the diocese of Pennsylvania.

The certificates of election of lay deputies, certified in writing by the warden and two vestrymen of the proper church, will be sent to Robert A. Lamberton, Esq., Harrisburg, whom I have requested to act as temporary secretary.

Praying that God may guide you in all your deliberations, and breathe upon you the spirit of peace and love and unity,

I remain with great respect,
WM. BACON STEVENS,
Bishop of the diocese of Pennsylvania.

Bounty Lands—Who are Entitled to Them.

The commissioners of pensions will soon issue instructions and new regulations for procuring bounty land warrants through that office. The following instructions will be of interest to many:

The acts of Congress now in force granting bounty land, entitle each of the surviving persons in the following list to a certificate or warrant for such quantity of land as shall make, in the whole, with what he may have heretofore received, 160 acres, provided he shall have served a period of not less than fourteen days, to wit:

I. Commissioned and non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates, whether of the regulars, volunteers, rangers or militia, who were regularly mustered into the service of the United States in any of the wars in which this country has been engaged since 1790 and prior to March 3d, 1865, to-wit:

II. Commissioned and non-commissioned officers, seamen, ordinary seamen, flotillamen, marines, clerks and landsmen in the navy in any of the said wars.

III. Militia, volunteers and State troops of any State or Territory called into military service, and regularly mustered therein and whose service have been paid by the United States.

IV. Wagon masters and teamsters who have been employed under the direction of competent authority, in time of war, in the transportation of military stores and supplies.

V. Officers and soldiers of the Revolutionary war, and marines, seamen and other persons in the naval service of the United States during that war.

VI. Chaplains who served with the army in the several wars of this country.

VII. Volunteers who served with the armed forces of the United States in any of the wars mentioned, subject to military orders, whether regularly mustered into the United States service or not.

Each of the surviving persons in the following classes are entitled to a certificate for a like quantity of land without regard to the length of this service (provided he was regularly mustered into service,) to wit:

1. Officers and soldiers who have been actually engaged in any battle in any of the wars in which this country has been engaged prior to the rebellion.

2. Those volunteers who served at the invasion of Plattsburg, in September, 1814.

3. The volunteers who served at the battle of King's mountain, in the Revolutionary war.

4. The volunteers who served at the battle of Nickojack against the confederate savages of the South.

5. The volunteers who served at the attack on Lewiston, Delaware, by the British fleet in the war of 1812.

In addition to these classes these acts also extend to all Indians who served in the United States in any of their wars prior to the war of the rebellion, the provisions of this and all the bounty land laws heretofore passed, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the Indians had been white men.

Where the service has been rendered by a substitute, he is the person entitled to these acts, and not his employer.

In the event of the death of any person who, if living, would be entitled to a certificate or warrant as aforesaid, leaving a widow, if no widow, such minor child or children, is entitled to a certificate or warrant for the same quantity of land such deceased person would be entitled to receive under the provisions of said acts if now living:

A subsequent marriage will not impair the right of any such widow to such warrant if she be a widow at the time of her application. Persons within the age of twenty-one years on the 3d day of March, 1865, are deemed minors within the intent and meaning of said acts.

AN APPEAL

To Debilitated Persons,
To Dyspeptics,
To Sufferers from Liver Complaint,
To those having no Appetite,
To those with Broken Down Constitutions,
To Nervous people,
To Children Wasting Away,
To any with Debilitated Digestive Organs,

Or suffering with any of the following Symptoms, which indicate Disordered Liver or Stomach, such as Constipation, Inward Piles, Fulness of Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a Lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Fever and dull pain in the head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, &c., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and great Depression of Spirits.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

A Bitters without Alcohol or Spirits of any kind.

Is different from all others. It is composed of the pure Juices, or Vital Principle of Roots, Herbs, and Barks, (or, as medicinally termed Extracts,) the worthless or inert portions of the ingredients not being used. Therefore in one Bottle of this Bitters there is contained as much medicinal virtue as will be found in several gallons of ordinary mixtures. The Roots, &c., used in this Bitters are grown in Germany, their vital principles extracted in that country by a scientific Chemist, and forwarded to the manufactory in this city, where they are compounded and bottled. Containing no spirituous ingredients, this Bitters is free from the objections urged against all others; no desire for stimulants can be induced from their use, they cannot make drunkards, and cannot under any circumstances, have any but a beneficial effect.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN TONIC,

Was compounded for those not inclined to extreme bitters, and is intended for use in cases where some alcoholic stimulant is required in connection with the Tonic properties of the Bitters. Each bottle of the Tonic contains one bottle of the Bitters, combined with pure SANTA CRUZ RUM, and flavored in such a manner that the extreme bitterness of the bitters is overcome, forming a preparation highly agreeable and pleasant to the palate, and containing the medicinal virtues of the Bitters. The price of the Tonic is $1.50 per Bottle, which many persons think too high. They must take into consideration that the stimulant used is guaranteed to be of a pure quality. A poor article could be furnished at a cheaper price, but is it not better to pay a little more and have a good article? A medicinal preparation should contain none but the best ingredients; and they who expect to obtain a cheap compound, and be benefitted by it will most certainly be cheated.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN TONIC,

They are the Greatest

BLOOD PURIFIERS

The whole SUPREME COURT of Pennsylvania

SPEAK FOR THESE REMEDIES.

Who would ask for more Dignified and Stronger Testimony?

Hon. GEORGE W. WOODWARD, former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, at present Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, writes:

PHILADELPHIA, March 16th, 1867.

I find "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in cases of debility and want of nervous action in the system. Yours truly

GEORGE W. WOODWARD.

Hon. JAMES THOMSON, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28, 1867.

I consider "Hoofland's German Bitters" a valuable medicine in case of attacks of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it. Yours, with respect,

JAMES THOMSON.

Hon. GEORGE SHARSWOOD, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1, 1868.

I have found by experience that "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a very good tonic, relieving dyspeptic symptoms almost directly.

GEORGE SHARSWOOD.

Hon. WM. F. ROGERS, Mayor of the City of Buffalo, N. Y.

Mayor's Office, Buffalo, June 22, 1869.

I have used "Hoofland's German Bitters and Tonic" in my family during the past year, and can recommend them as an excellent tonic, imparting tone and vigor to the system. Their use has been productive of decidedly beneficial effects.

WM. F. ROGERS.

Hon. JAMES M. WOOD, Ex-Mayor of Williamsport Pa.

I take great pleasure in recommending "Hoofland's German Tonic" to any one who may be afflicted with Dyspepsia. I had the Dyspepsia so badly it was impossible to keep any food in my stomach, and I became so weak as not to be able to walk half a mile. Two bottles of Tonic effected a perfect cure.

JAMES M. WOOD.

Or Wasting away of the Body.

REMEMBER

THAT

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES

Are the medicines you require to purify the Blood, excite the torpid Liver to healthy action, and to enable you to pass safely through any hardships or exposure.

DR. HOOFLAND'S

PODOPHYLLIN,

OR

SUBSTITUTE FOR MERCURY PILLS.

TWO PILLS A DOSE.

The most Powerful, Yet Innocent, Vegetable Cathartic known.

It is not necessary to take a handful of these Pills to produce the desired effect; two of them act quickly and powerfully, cleansing the Liver, Stomach and Bowels of all impurities. The principal ingredient is Podophyllin, or the Alcoholic Extract of Mandrake, which is by many times more powerful, acting and searching than the Mandrake itself. Its peculiar action is upon the Liver, cleansing it speedily from all obstructions, with all the power of Mercury, yet free from the injurious results attached to the use of that mineral.

For all diseases in which the use of a cathartic is indicated, these pills will give entire satisfaction in every case. They NEVER FAIL.

In cases of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and extreme costiveness, Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters or Tonic should be used in connection with the Pills. The tonic effect of the Bitters or Tonic builds up the system. The Bitters or Tonic purifies the Blood, strengthens the Nerves, REGULATES the Liver, and gives strength, energy and vigor.

Keep your Bowels active with the Pills, and tone up the system with Bitters or Tonic, and no disease can retain its hold, or ever assail you.

Recollect that it is DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN Remedies that are so universally used and highly recommended; and do not allow the Druggist to induce you to take anything else that he may say is just as good, because he makes a larger profit on it.

These Remedies will be sent by express to any locality, upon application to the PRINCIPAL OFFICE, at the GERMAN MEDICINE STORE, 631 Arch St., Philadelphia.

CHAS. M. EVANS, Proprietor.

These Remedies are for sale by Druggists, Storekeepers, and Medicine Dealers everywhere.

THE Lycoming Insurance company has imposed an extra assessment of 12½ per cent. upon its members to meet its losses by the Chicago fire. As there is both a mutual and a stock branch of this company, it would be interesting to the members to know how much each had lost.

THE Northumberland Baptist Association held its annual session at Milton in the latter part of September. The body is composed of Churches situated in Columbia, Montour, Northumberland, Lycoming, Clinton, Sullivan, Union, Snyder and Cameron counties. The Association has within its bounds 33 churches and 3098 members. Baptisms during the year 202. The benevolent contributions reported amounted to over $25,000. $612 was subscribed in aid of the church at Milton. The Association meets at Watsontown next year.

WHITE VESTS.—It is said there is a mania pervading fashionable swells for white vests with gilt buttons. This is somewhat singular, for swells never do anything within reason, especially in matters of dress. A black coat and pants, with white vest, is the neatest dress a gentleman can wear. We have nothing to say about the gilt buttons, though in modern times they ought not to be objectionable since brass forms the stable production of nine-tenths of the fashionable world. If the swells are raging for such a dress as we have described, it is the first time we ever heard of them having common sense.—Exchange.

Sunday School Convention.

THE Annual Convention of the Columbia county Sabbath School Association will be held in Espy (Lutheran Church) on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, November 14th, 15th and 16th. This association is composed of all denominations of Christians and it is hoped that every superintendent, officer and teacher of Sabbath Schools will feel especially interested in its success. Every school in the county should be represented. Schools can send as many delegates as they choose. All officers and teachers of Sabath Schools and all ministers are entitled to membership and are cordially invited to take part in the work. "In the multitude of Counsellors there is safety." Let us have a full turn out of the friends of the cause. Delegates will be entertained by the citizens of Espy. Eminent Sabbath School workers will assist us. Superintendents will please send to N. RICHART, Espy, Pa., for blank reports to be filled up for the Convention.

By order of the Executive Committee.

IT is now estimated that the city of Chicago has suffered a loss of not less than twenty nor more than twenty-five per cent. on her total assets, real and personal. Her most shrewd business men express it as their conviction that five years hence, at most, the exhibit of population, wealth, commerce, and manufactures will be even greater than a month ago; an opinion in which we fully concur.

CHICAGO NOTES.—It is indeed an ill wind that blows nobody good. It is said that there is not a single indictment left against any accused person in Cook county, Illinois, which is certainly a piece of good fortune for some rogues. But, on the other hand, the lawyers have suffered severely. Hardly a law library or law office is left; not a paper to show that there is a suit pending in any of the six courts of the county; not a judgment, not a petition in bankruptcy in the federal courts. And worse yet, so far as is known, all the records of deeds and mortgages are destroyed.

CHICAGO.

THE ACTUAL STATE OF AFFAIRS.

Interesting and Reliable Statistics.

The Chicago Tribune, of October 19th, has the following:

WHAT IS SPARED US.

"Our columns have been so extensively occupied during the past week with reports of the enormous losses of life and property in the late fire that there is some danger that the damage sustained will be over-estimated. True, we have seen 2,500 acres in the most central portion of the city swept bare, 20,000 buildings destroyed, and 100,000 persons rendered homeless, the total pecuniary loss being not less than

but we have still a great deal left. We may roughly estimate the situation as follows:

"Above 50,000 persons have left the city; population remaining, 290,000.

"Five grain elevators were burned, with 1,600,000 bushels of grain; leaving us with eleven grain warehouses intact, containing 5,000,000 bushels.

"One-half of our stocks of pork products were burned up, with the same proportion of flour.

"Of lumber, 50,000,000 feet were burned; the stock remaining is 240,000,000 feet.

"Of coal, 80,000 tons were burned up; we have 79,000 tons on hand.

"Our stock of leather was decreased one-quarter, the value of that burned up being $95,000.

"The greater portion of the stocks of groceries, dry goods, and boots and shoes were burned up, with more than one half the ready made clothing; but the quantities destroyed were scarcely equal to more than a three weeks' supply, and are now being rapidly replaced.

NOT MORE THAN TEN PER CENT of the currency was destroyed by the fire; we have 80,000 houses left standing, and our real estate could not burn up.

"A careful average of these larger items, with smaller ones that need not be enumerated, shows that the city of Chicago has suffered a loss of not less than 20, nor more than 25, per cent. on her total assets—real and personal. The loss is a great one; but, so far from irretrievable, that we may confidently hope to see a return to former prosperity ere long. The ratio of increase during the past thirty-four years has averaged 10½ per cent. per annum. This rate would restore the status of a month ago within three years. Making every due allowance for the terrible set back experienced, there can be no doubt that at most, the exhibit of population, wealth, commerce and manufactures will be greater than a month ago. Already the city is rising from its ashes at a rapid rate, thanks to the large-hearted liberality of our countrymen everywhere, and the resistless energy of our own citizens. Let the faint-hearted ones take courage; the real workers have not wasted a moment in regret; after have repaired their losses there will be no occasion for it.

ATROCIOUS FABRICATIONS.

"The papers of the Eastern cities are publishing personal experiences of persons professing to have been sufferers by the fire in this city. These stories are for the most part fabrications. The descriptions given of murders and rapes by bullies, thieves, and ruffians, during the progress of the fire, are

WRETCHED INVENTIONS.

"A respectable New York paper gives room to a long recital of the narrow escape of 200 abandoned women from their lodgings in Reynolds' Block. The pictures of obscenity and profanity are drawn by an expert, but are wholly destitute of truth. No woman of that or any other class, occupied rooms in that block. The fire was horrible enough in all its details; there was a full share of the selfishness and heartlessness peculiar to human nature; there were frequent cases of drunkenness and indifference to the impending calamity, but there was no general brutality, fiendishness, nor crime. The thousand stories of incendiarism and crime during the progress of the fire perversions or pure fabrications. There was little time for stealing; the fire was too close upon the heels of honest men and thieves, and but little even of what was stolen could be carried off.

ARE GROSS EXAGGERATIONS,

"The news of the fire brought hither from other cities; but these did not reach here until Wednesday and Thursday, and by that time public vigilance had been aroused, and their stay was short and unprofitable. The suffering of our people was terrible enough; it needs no exaggeration to make it the most extensive scene of human misery; but for the credit of common humanity we desire to stamp these stories of murder and other no less atrocious crimes as false in every particular.

THE DISTRIBUTION OF SUPPLIES.

"The system of relief inaugurated on Tuesday appears now to be working with the most gratifying smoothness, for which the Relief and Aid Society is deserving of the warmest admiration. Though colossal in its proportions, and labyrinthine in its intricacy, it is almost self-directing. The impulse once given, every piece of machinery is set in perfect motion. By Saturday, it is believed that every applicant will be recognized and registered; every bushel of flour, every pound of meat, every cent of money, will be also registered, and its distribution strictly accounted for.

"Meantime, the amount of provisions in store at the great depots is gradually diminishing. At the warehouse of corner of Grove and Eighteenth streets, a very large quantity of provisions is in store. The warehouse is a model of neatness and order, and is carefully guarded. The work of receiving here was entrusted to General Harde, United States army. He has endeavored, as much as possible, to concentrate the depots. There are, at present, the warehouse referred to, Shaw's packing house, at the foot of Twenty-first street, and the West Side Rink. These contain all the provisions in the city, and supply the direct centres on orders.

THREE GENERAL RECEIVING CENTRES,

THE SUPPLIES AT PRESENT.

"There are at present in store the following supplies: Flour and breadstuffs, 2,000 barrels; meat, 30,000 pounds; stores, 300; blankets, 20,000; clothing, 550 cases; potatoes, 6,500 bushels; mattresses, 600, and a large amount of soap and miscellaneous articles. From this it will be seen that, while there is a large and promising supply of breadstuffs, the meat and small groceries are not as plentiful as could be desired. However, a rigid economy will be brought to bear, and none but the needy will be assisted. There are at present rations for 150,000 persons for one day, or for about 35,000 persons for four days, which is supposed to be an approximate estimate of the number needing succor.

SHELTER.

"A view of the headquarters of the various committees yesterday was particularly promising. All are hard at work, and everything is going on with the regularity of clockwork. The shelter committee has on hand about 1,000 applications for building materials, while over 150 orders have already been issued. A very large number will be given to-day, the applications having been subjected to an examination, and a large number found deserving.

NEVERMORE! NEVERMORE!—Is the sad exclamation of the invalid, who has abandoned, for some worthless compound, a sterling medicinal preparation. If any sufferer from Dyspepsia, Constipation, Biliousness or Debility, has been lured, in a weak moment from either of those two sovereign Vegetable Specifics, Hoofland's German Bitters, or Hoofland's Tonic, and induced to "run after strange gods," "Nevermore! Nevermore!" is his cry, as he returns disgusted to the standard remedy. Sold by all druggists.

TRUST WHAT TIME HAS SANCTIONED.—The maxim that the voice of the people is the voice of the divinity, may in some cases, be open to doubt, but the testimony of honest and enlightened witnesses extending through a series of years, and all to the same purport, is worthy of credence, admits of no question. Upon such testimony the reputation of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as an antidote and cure for many ailments is based. During the twenty years that it has been before the world, innumerable preparations intended to compete with it, have gone up like rockets, and come down the extinguished sticks. Meanwhile the progress of that incomparable tonic has been swift and steady—always upward and onward like the eagle's flight. Its introduction produced a revolution in therapeutics, and it proved to be one of those salutary revolutions that cannot go backwards. To-day Hostetter's Bitters is one of the most popular remedies in christendom, and commands a larger sale than any other medicinal preparation, domestic or imported, on this side of the Atlantic. As a cure for dyspepsia, bilious disorders, nervous affections, general debility, and as a preventive of epidemic fevers, it takes precedence of every other remedy. This fact should teach the ambitious country dealers who endeavor to foist their local abortions on the public in its stead, how futile their small attempts to ejude the community must necessarily be. Where the game fish have failed there is no chance for the "suckers."

Female Influence.

Domestic life is a woman's sphere; it is there that she is most usefully and most appropriately employed. But society, too, feels her influence, and owes to her, in great measure, its balance and its tone. She may be here a corrective of what is unruly, a restraint on what is indecorous. Her presence may be a pledge against impropriety and excess, a check on vice, and a protection to virtue. And it is her delicacy which will secure her such an influence, and enable her to maintain it.

Delicacy is, indeed, the point of honor in woman. And her purity of manner insures to her deference, and represses more effectually than any other influence, impropriety of every kind. A delicate woman, too, will be more loved as well as more respected, than any other; for affection can scarcely be excited, and certainly cannot long subsist, unless it is founded on esteem. Yet such delicacy is neither prudish nor insipid. Conversation, for instance, is one great source of a woman's influence and it is her province, and peculiar talent, to give zest to it. She is, and ought to be, the enlivener of society; if she restrains impropriety she may promote cheerfulness; and it is not because her conversation is innocent that it need therefore be dull. The charm of conversation is feeling; forgetting one'sself, and sympathizing with others. It is not to shine, but to please, that a woman should desire.

A woman should be elegant, not only in manner but in mind. Manner is, indeed, generally symptomatic; but, as it may be artificial, it is no sure criterion of mental grace. It is the latter which is essential to true beauty. Without it the fairest form disappoints and wearies. It is the radiance that sets off every other charm and sheds on each its appropriate hue. It is tint and proportion. Yet it is more easily understood than defined, and better felt than expressed. It is a criterion of elegance. The modes of fashion are entirely conventional, and are often ungraceful as they are capricious. But breeding is quite a different thing. It is unobtrusive and unpretending. It is always self-possessed and at ease; for it knows its own place and its own relations, nor are its attentions ever troublesome. Yet this quiet and lady-like deportment though it seems to employ no effort is by no means an easy or a common attainment. On the contrary, we often see women who have lived much in society very deficient in this criterion of grace. And we can quite understand the remark of a really well-bred woman on a candidate for fashionable society: "Yes; she is very pretty, and very pleasing, but she wants repose."

Elegance is nature, but not rude nature; it is unaffected but not unpolished. It copies natural grace, and corrects natural defects. Yet it is no servile imitator; for it studies suitability as well as simplicity. It does not, for instance, imagine that what is very pretty and playful in a girl of fourteen is equally becoming at thirty. Least of all does it indulge in that raillery, which is piquant only because it is personal, and which amuses in proportion as it annoys. It has a respect for the feelings, and a tenderness even for the faults of others; and as it never wounds, so does it never invite aggression. It implies, too, feeling; and here again does it differ from the polish of the world. Selfishness is the bane of fashionable life. Every one is there cold, for every one is selfish.

A German Story.

In that beautiful part of Germany bordering on the Rhine, there is a noble castle, which, as you travel on the western bank of the river, you may see lifting its ancient towers on the opposite bank, above the grove of trees which are as old as itself. About forty years ago there lived in that castle a noble gentleman, whom we shall now call the Baron. The Baron had an only son, who was not only a comfort to his father, but a blessing to all who lived on his father's land.

It happened on one occasion that the young man being from home there came a French gentleman to see the Baron. As this gentleman came into the castle, he began to talk of his Heavenly Father in terms that chilled the old man's blood, on which the old man reproved him, saying, 'Are you not afraid of offending God, who reigns above, by speaking in such a manner?'

The gentleman said he knew nothing about God, that he had never seen him; the Baron did not notice at this time what the gentleman said, but the next morning, took occasion, first, to show him a beautiful picture that hung on the wall.

'My son drew that picture,' said the Baron.

'Then your son is a clever man,' replied the gentleman.

Then the Baron went with him into the garden and showed him many beautiful flowers and plants.

'Who has the ordering of the garden?' said the gentleman.

'My son,' said the Baron; 'he knows every plant, I may say, from the cedar of Lebanon to the hissop on the wall.'

'Indeed,' said the gentleman; 'I shall think very highly of him soon.'

The Baron took him into the village, and showed him a small, neat cottage, where his son had established a school and where he caused all poor children who had lost their parents to be received and nourished at his own expense.

The children in this house looked so happy and innocent that the French gentleman was very much pleased, and when he returned to the castle he said to the Baron:

'What a happy man are you to have so good a son!'

'How do you know that I have a good son?'

'Because I have seen his works, and I know that he must be clever and good, if he has done all you have shown me.'

'But you have never seen him.'

'No, but I know him very well, because I judge of him by his works.'

'You do; and now please draw near this window, and tell me what you observe from thence.'

'Why, I see the sun traveling through the sky, and shedding its glories over one of the greatest countries in the world; and a vast range of woods, and I see pasture grounds and vineyards, and cattle and sheep feeding in green fields, and many thatched cottages here and there.'

'And do you see nothing pleasant or lovely or cheerful in all that is spread before you?'

'Do you think that I want common sense, or that I have lost the use of my eyes, my friend?' said the gentleman, getting angry, 'that I should not be able to enjoy such a scene as this?'

'Well, then,' said the Baron, 'If you are able to judge of my son's good works, how does it happen that you form no judgment of the goodness of God, by witnessing such wonders of his handiwork as are now before you? Let me never hear you, my good friend, again say that you know not God, unless you have not the use of your senses.'

RELIGION is the best armor in the world but the worst cloak.

REALLY to inform the mind is to correct and enlarge the heart.

NO MAN can be elevated who does not love something higher and better than himself.

WISDOM and power, like piety, are perfected through suffering.

DO NOT condemn or think hard of those who cannot see just as you see, or judge it their duty to contradict you.

SANDS from the mountain; moments make the year.

IF good men are sad, it is not because they are good, but because they are not better.

GET all you can, save all you can, give all you can.

LOSE not thy own for the sake of asking for it; 'twill give thee no thanks.

THE generous heart should scorn a pleasure which gives others pain.

THE whole sum of human virtue may be reduced to speaking the truth always, and doing good to others.

MERIT readily recognizes merit. Certainly he cannot have it who doesn't know it when he sees it.

ONE principal point of good breeding is to suit ourselves to three several degrees of men—our superiors, our equals and those below us.

A LITTLE philosophy inclineth a man's mind to atheism, but depth of philosophy bringeth one's mind about to religion.

HONEST industry is, after all, man's only sure dependence for the double blessing of a contented mind and comfortable livelihood.

LOVE may exist without jealousy, although this is rare; but jealousy may exist without love, and this is common.

AN hour's industry will do more to produce cheerfulness, suppress evil humors, and retrieve your affairs, than a month's moaning.

A MAN behind the times is apt to speak ill of them, on the principle that nothing looks well from behind.

MEN'S hearts ought not to be set against one another, but set with one another, and all against the evil thing only.

THE happiness of the human race in this world does not consist of our being devoid of passions, but in our learning to command them.

SOME men are kinder to the occupants of their kennels than to their families. They will treat wife and children like dogs, but not dogs themselves so.

A MAN should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is but saying, in other words, that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday.

IN all differences consider that both you and your opponent are dropping off, and that ere long your very memories will be extinguished.

IMPERTURBABLE good temper is an effectual defense against ill-natured sarcasm. The laugh is never long against the man who meets ridicule serenely.

AS WE hold a candle to the flame until it is fully lighted, so we must hold ourselves to Christ and his word by meditation.

Bestow all the time you can spare from the necessary business of life, in preparing yourself and those about you, for their entrance into a better life.

IT is vain to hope to please all alike. Let a man stand with his face in what direction he will, he must necessarily turn his back on one half of the world.

NEVER hold anyone by the button or the hand, in order to be heard out; for if people are unwilling to hear you, you had better hold your tongue than them.

WHO sedulously attends, pointedly asks, calmly speaks, coolly answers, and ceases when he has no more to say, is in possession of some of the best requisites of man.

THERE is not so agonizing a feeling in the whole catalogue of human suffering as the first conviction that the heart of the being whom we most tenderly love is estranged from us.

A WESTERN paper accuses a cotemporary of "dirty meanness," and remarks, "We want him to understand that two can play at that game." A rather frank avowal.

P[redacted] friends. A single drop of [illegible] very small thing, yet dropped into a tumbler of clear, pure water, it blackens the whole.

Do daily and hourly your duty: do it patiently and thoroughly. Do it as it presents itself, do it at the moment, and let it be its own reward. Never mind whether it is known or acknowledged or not; but do not fail to do it.

PERPETUAL complaints are like unto a new cart, which creaks and cries even while it has no burden but its own wheels; whereas that which is long used and well oiled, goes silently away with a heavy load.

HAIL! ye small, sweet courtesies of life, for smooth do ye make the road of it like grace and beauty which beget inclinations to love at the first sight; 'tis ye who open the door and let the stranger in.

GIVE not thy tongue too great a liberty lest it make thee prisoner. A word unspoken is like the sword in the scabbard—thine; if vented, thy sword is in another's hand. If thou desirest to be held wise, be so wise as to hold thy tongue.

POLITENESS is a spontaneous movement of a good heart and an observing mind. Benevolence will teach us temperance toward the feeling of others and habits of observation will enable us to promptly and easily tell what those feelings are.

Let us be hearty in our pleasures as in our work, and not think the gracious Being who has made us so open-hearted to delight, looks with dissatisfaction at our enjoyments, as a hard taskmaster might, who in the glee of his slaves could see only a hindrance to their profitable working.

CONSUMPTION,
ITS CURE AND ITS PREVENTIVE,
BY J. H. SCHENCK, M. D.

Many a human being has passed away, for whose death there was no other reason than the neglect of known and indisputably proven means of cure. Those near and dear to family and friends are sleeping the dreamless slumber into which, had they calmly adopted and availed themselves of his wonderful efficacious medicines, they would not have fallen.

DR. JOSEPH H. SCHENCK'S SIMPLE TREATMENT,

Dr. Schenck has in his own case proved that wherever sufficient vitality remains, that vitality, by his medicines and his directions for their use, is quickened into healthful vigor.

In this statement there is nothing presumptuous. To the faith of the invalid is made no representation that is not a thousand times substantiated by living and visible works. The theory of the cure by Dr. Schenck's medicines is as simple as it is unfailing. Its philosophy requires no argument. It is self-assuring, self-convincing.

The Seaweed Tonic and Mandrake Pills are the first two weapons with which the citadel of the malady is assailed. Two-thirds of the cases of consumption originate in dyspepsia and a functionally disordered liver. With this condition, the bronchial tubes "sympathize" with the stomach. They respond to the morbific action of the liver. Here then comes the culminating result, and the setting in, with all its distressing symptoms, of

CONSUMPTION.

The Mandrake Pills are composed of one of Nature's noblest gifts—the Podophillum Peltatum. They possess all the blood-searching, alterative properties of calomel, but unlike calomel, they

"LEAVE NO STING BEHIND."

The work of cure is now beginning. The vitiated and mucous deposits in the bowels and in the alimentary canal are ejected. The liver, like a clock, is wound up. It arouses from its torpidity. The stomach acts responsively, and the patient begins to feel that he is getting at last,

A SUPPLY OF GOOD BLOOD.

The Seaweed Tonic, in conjunction with the Pills, permeates and assimilates with the food. Chylification is now progressing without its previous tortures. Digestion becomes painless, and the cure is seen to be at hand. There is no more flatulence, no exacerbation of the stomach. An appetite sets in.

Now comes the greatest Blood Purifier ever yet given by an indulgent father to suffering man. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup comes in to perform its functions and to hasten and complete the cure. It enters at once upon its work. Nature cannot be cheated. It collects and ripens the impaired and diseased portions of the lungs. In the form of gatherings, it prepares them for expectoration, and lo! in a very short time the malady is vanquished, the rotten throne that it occupied is renovated and made new, and the patient, in all the dignity of regained vigor, steps forth to enjoy the manhood or the womanhood that was GIVEN UP AS LOST.

The second thing is, the patients must stay in a warm room until they get well; it is almost impossible to prevent taking cold when the lungs are diseased, but it must be prevented or a cure cannot be effected. Fresh air and riding out, especially in this section of the country in the fall and winter season, are all wrong. Physicians who recommend that course lose their patients, if their lungs are badly diseased, and yet, because they are in the house they must not sit down quiet; they must walk about the room as much and as fast as the strength will bear, to get up a good circulation of blood. The patients must keep in good spirits—be determined to get well. This has a great deal to do with the appetite, and is the great point to gain.

To despair of cure after such evidence of its possibility in the worst cases, and moral certainty in all others, is sinful. Dr. Schenck's personal statement to the Faculty of his own cure was in these modest words:

"Many years ago I was in the last stages of consumption; confined to my bed, and at one time my physicians thought that I could not live a week; then, like a drowning man catching at straws, I heard of and obtained the preparations which I now offer to the public, and they made a perfect cure of me. It seemed to me that I could feel them penetrate my whole system. They soon ripened the matter in my lungs, and I would spit up more than a pint of offensive yellow matter every morning for a long time.

As soon as that began to subside my cough, fever, pain and night sweats all began to leave me, and my appetite became so great that it was with difficulty that I could keep from eating too much. I soon gained my strength, and have grown in flesh ever since."

"I was weighed shortly after my recovery," added the Doctor, "then looking like a mere skeleton; my weight was only ninety-seven pounds; my present weight is two hundred and twenty-five (225) pounds, and for years I have enjoyed uninterrupted health."

Dr. Schenck has discontinued his professional visits to New York and Boston. He or his son Dr. J. H. Schenck, Jr., still continues to see patients at their office, No. 15 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, every Saturday from 9 A. M., to 3 P. M. Those who wish a thorough examination with the Respirometer will be charged $5. The Respirometer declares the exact condition of the lungs, and patients can readily learn whether they are curable or not.

The directions for taking the medicines are adapted to the intelligence even of a child. Follow these directions, and kind Nature will do the rest, excepting that in some cases the Mandrake Pills are to be taken in increased doses; the three medicines need no other accompaniments than the ample instructions that accompany them: First create appetite. Of returning health hunger is the most welcome symptom. When it comes, as it will come, let the despairing at once be of good cheer. Good blood at once follows, the cough loosens, the night sweat is abated. In a short time both of these morbid symptoms are gone forever.

Dr. Schenck's medicines are constantly kept in tens of thousands of families. As a laxative or purgative, the Mandrake Pills are a standard preparation; while the Pulmonic Syrup, as a curer of coughs and colds, may be regarded as a prophylacteric against consumption in any of its forms.

Price of the Pulmonic Syrup and Seaweed Tonic, $1.50 a bottle, or $7.50 a half dozen. Mandrake Pills, 25 cents a box. For sale by all druggists and dealers.

A GREAT MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Dr. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS.
Hundreds of Thousands
Bear testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.
WHAT ARE THEY?

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

THEY ARE NOT A VILE
FANCY DRINK.

Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell.

$100 will be given for an incurable case, provided the bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid liver and bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effect.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

PIN, TAPE and other WORMS, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. For full directions, read carefully the circular around each bottle, printed in four languages—English, German, French and Spanish.

WHEELER & WILSON MACHINES
in the market. Why is it?
MANY WORN-OUT MACHINES
of other manufacture in the market. Why is it?
Because, with an INCREASE OF POWER,
There is a
DECREASE OF FRICTION.

In other words, it is simple and adjustable.

Its easy, sprightly motion, when compared with the more ponderous movement of the Shuttle machines, evinces this.

Buy a Wheeler & Wilson, and you will have a machine that will never wear out.

Component Parts—Fluid Extract Rhubarb and Fluid Extract Catawba Grape

FOR LIVER COMPLAINTS, JAUNDICE, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, SICK OR NERVOUS HEADACHE, COSTIVENESS, Etc. PURELY VEGETABLE, CONTAINING NO MERCURY MINERALS OR DELETERIOUS DRUGS.

These Pills are the most delightfully pleasant purgative, superseding castor oil, salts, magnesia, etc. There is nothing more acceptable to the stomach. They give tone, and cause neither nausea nor griping pains. They are composed of the finest ingredients. After a few days' use of them, such an invigoration of the entire system takes place as to appear miraculous to the weak and enervated, whether arising from imprudence or disease. H. T. Helmbold's Compound Fluid Extract Catawba Grape Pills are not sugar-coated, from the fact that sugar-coated Pills do not dissolve, but pass through the stomach without dissolving, consequently do not produce the desired effect. THE CATAWBA GRAPE PILLS being pleasant in taste and odor, do not necessitate their being sugar-coated. PRICE FIFTY CENTS PER BOX.

LADIES.

In many affections peculiar to ladies, the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy—as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrus State of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation. H. T. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU CURES DISEASES ARISING FROM IMPRUDENCE, HABITS OF DISSIPATION, ETC.,

in all their stages, at little expense, little or no change in diet, no inconvenience, and no exposure. It causes a frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, Allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous matter.

Thousands who have been the victims of incompetent persons, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they have been deceived, and that the "Poison" has, by the use of "powerful astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in a more aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all Affections and Diseases of the Urinary Organs, whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing. PRICE ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS PER BOTTLE.
